

Confidently Auditing Clinical Documentation:

A Primer for Quality Assurance, Performance Improvement & Clinical Proficiency

Thursday, October 12, 2017, 2:00 pm to 3:30 p.m. Eastern

Recording available

The important task of auditing interdisciplinary documentation is not an easy one. Evaluating the quality of the content for disciplines that are different from the clinical background of the reviewers is especially challenging. With many internal and external reviewers having a background in nursing, therapy documentation can seem like a foreign language. Many agencies have firsthand experience with denials and the associated loss of revenue due to "insufficient" therapy documentation but still lack confidence that they can proactively manage the ever-present risks.

Objectives:

This session will provide a solid foundation for auditing the quality of clinical documentation by focusing on the key elements that define and confirm "skilled, reasonable and necessary." Attendees will come away from this session empowered to confidently audit clinical documentation in an effective and efficient manner.

Continuing Education:

RNs and LPNs must participate in the entire presentation for contact hours to be awarded. To apply for nursing contact hours, please mail an evaluation form and a completed sign-in sheet, listing the individuals at your facility that participated and noting those requesting contact hours.

Individuals requesting contact hours will receive a certificate of contact hours earned. Please make sure that you enter the Contact Person's name in the Registration Form. All correspondence and site registration information will be sent to this person. No commercial support has been provided for this program.
