

Nearly, 1 in 5 adults has a mental illness. By 2030, adults over 65 will account for 20% of the US population. Research from the CDC shows that Medicare recipients in home health have diagnoses of Depression at a rate of 37.9% and Dementia at 31.4%. These diagnoses often complicate the successful treatment of other co-morbidities and have negative effects on outcomes and increase health care costs, when not addressed. Older adults with depression and other mental illnesses have increased risk of hospitalizations, nursing home admissions, risk of falls and increased risk of ER and MD visits.
